In the new normal era, the public and community members are required to still active and stay productive, however by implementing strict health and safety protocols to prevent further disease transmission. Commercial buildings and public spaces need to be more responsive to the prevention of nosocomial infections, and better equipped to anticipate epidemics and pandemics. In this 2nd series of ArchiTalk, we will discuss how public facilities need to adapt and anticipate going forward, to cope with the various impacts the pandemic has caused to the society. This webinar organized by collaboration of Indonesia Construction & Architecture Network (www.arsitektur.asia) and Construction Indonesia (www.constructionindo.com)
