Notes on the results of the review_BI_2012023

Dear editors

Here I submit the results of a review of the article with the following notes:

1. In general, this article has an excellent mission to meet the expectations of readers, namely to compare the construction of the Yogyakarta Special Region government and the State of Perak Malaysia, which focuses on the mechanism of regional head elections, the pattern of executive and legislative relations and the authority of each region. However, the content contained needs to fulfil this. Notes on the results of the review
2. In the introductory part, the author only explains the two countries' history but needs to explain the importance of conducting studies as the purpose of this article. Literature studies (in-depth state administrative policies and laws) are needed, even studies of history that can convince the reader that this article's studies are essential.
3. In the method section, the writer should explain the stages of the research so that it is easier for the reader to understand the research method fully.
4. In the discussion and findings section, the authors did not carry out in-depth comparisons and discussions of the two countries (on the regional head election mechanism, patterns of executive and legislative relations and the authority of each region), which resulted in findings (the reviewers did not find this).
5. The conclusion still needs to answer the purpose of writing this article.
6. References are still minimal.
7. Conclusion: This article still needs to be fit for publication; significant and fundamental changes are needed to be worth publishing.
